Our Teen Summer Reading Kickoff Party went extremely well. 20 teens attended in total, and they did very well pivoting from eating in the gallery to tie dying outside. We had more than enough shirts so that every kid could create one, too. Thanks to Ellie and Cathy and the rest of our staff for all their help that day.

Speaking of Teen Summer Reading, things have been going great so far. Like in year past, teens who read two titles (books, magazines, graphic novel/manga, etc) OR read 10 total hours (whatever they complete first) earn a smaller prize. All titles read, hours read, Selfies with Squirrels completed, and programs attended earn teens raffle tickets towards our prize drawing on August 15th. As of July 14, 37 teens have signed up for Summer Reading, and 12 of them have checked in to earn their first tier prize. Those twelve teens have also, between them, earned nearly 300 tickets into our prize drawing. I'm very happy with the numbers so far. We have a lot of extra programs this month alongside summer reading; I've attached the schedule for reference.

As part of our Summer Reading fun July 30th, Skylar Surra, senior principal animator from Riot Games, will be with us for a series of programs. Skylar is a native of Shinglehouse, PA and is volunteering his time to work with our patrons. He's hosting a doodling workshop with tweens (roughly ages 7-12) at 1:00, a character design workshop (where he shows teens how video game characters go from design brief from the team to a fully realized avatar) at 3:00, and a career talk for all ages at 6:00.

Adult programs are, per usual, a little up and down. Adult DnD and Knit and Crochet are both holding strong, as well as Brown Bag Book Club. Samantha and I will try Trivia again on July 22. Because we are not open on Saturdays between July and August, Knit and Crochet will meet on Tuesday, July 15th at 6 pm. Adult Summer Reading sign-ups, however, have been going very well.

Finally, we are featuring photography and abstract art by Lyn Harris in the Gallery during July.
